OCTOBER MEETING MINUTES

What a great meeting we had in October. 34 members and guests were in attendance. Members from Red Deer and St. Michael made the trip for what turned out to be a very fun and enjoyable meeting. Dan welcomed everyone to the meeting, including 3 new members who had recently joined. Members were advised of the recent robbery at National Pride Coin & Stamps. Ray was in attendance at the meeting. Mike mentioned that all the pre-sale tickets for the November show were in the hands of member sellers. Posters for the show were given out to those who wanted them. Dan announced the Nov. executive meeting will be held on Nov. 2 at Bernie Theriault's house. Members who want to attend are welcome. Member Laurie Whitrow, announced that coin dealer John Bieber's wife passed away in October. John has attended some of our shows in the past and is from Lloydminster.

The first speaker for the evening was member

James Kindrake. James's talk was on Cuban bank notes from 1949 to date. James brought his collection of notes, all UNC or better, with many Specimen notes as well. He went through the history of the notes from 1949, explaining how he acquired the notes, who was on the note etc. The collection was complete and the notes were circulated among the members to view. Our next speaker was Maurice Doll, Curator at the Provincial Museum. Maurice announced a Coin & Money exhibit which was opened in Calgary. He brought a copy of the catalogue for the members to view. The exhibit will be coming to Edmonton in the summer of 2001 and will be expanded upon in a 2500 sq. ft. area at the museum. The exhibit will be a World Coin display of Gold, Silver and Bronze coins. Members may be asked to add to the display. More info will follow. Our next speaker was Reinhard Hermesh, who talked on the topic of the Internet and how it is affecting the Hobby of Coin Collecting. Many members participated in the discussion, as many use the Internet and more specifically, EBay. Many have purchased coins and notes and some have had problems and some had great success. The use of the Internet has opened up numismatics from one individual to another from around the world, or an individual can purchase items from auction houses and dealers from around the world, opening up the market place. This has an effect on local dealers and prices also.

HONG KONG PHOOEY (Mea Culpa)

"From a statement issued last winter by Joseph Yam, chief of the Hong Kong Monetary Authority."

I have a confession to make. If readers examine the design of our coins they will find it, at best, unattractive and unremarkable. Those with any artistic sense might even think it repulsive. I am the one to blame for this sorry state. Yes, the coins were designed by me, and I am sorry that users have to put up with them every day. But it was the best design that I could come up with.

The task was to create a politically neutral design. But the confidential nature of this mater did not allow the appointment of an artist, and so the job was given to yours truly. I obtained a number of photographs of the bauhinia flower from the Information Services Department on the pretense that I was designing a logo. For the Chinese characters, I copied the relevant ones myself from a piece of calligraphy I commissioned on a passage containing those characters. It was then a simple cut-and-paste job that a primary school child would have found easy.

So there you are; coins of a design hardly befitting the status of Hong Kong as in international financial centre. And for this I would like to offer my belated apologies to the people of Hong Kong. Perhaps we should review the design of our coins in circulation soon, if only to make me feel less guilty.

Russian Numismatic Issues Mirror Nation's Stormy History

By Victor C. Seibert

Five distinct categories are available to any hobbyist who chooses the Russian Soviet field for his collecting activities. Fortunately, all five categories have items available at present day bourses at coin shows and conventions across the country. The items, in most cases are within the economic reach of most collectors and all five categories are covered by authoritative publications that will aid serious study of numismatics.

The first category under the general heading of numismatics is the collecting and study of coins and medals. Russian coinage dates back to the days when furs and hides were used as money. These, if found, would be far too expensive for the average hobbyist. However, silver wire coins dating back to the 15th and 16th centuries are available at the largest coin shows and at nominal prices. Silver rubles and copper kopeks attributed to the mid 19th century are available, too. For the affluent collector, gold and platinum coins are to be found at most of the larger coin conventions. Mint sets may be obtained from the Foreign Trades Bank of the Soviet Period. The base metal coins of the present time are also readily available. The following publication is recommended for the collector of coins: Russian Monetary System by Spassky, which is available in both English and Russian.

Medals have been issued in Russia since the time of Peter the Great in gold, silver, bronze and alloys. The medals were issued to honor great personages and historical events, such as commemorating the manufacturing of coins by steam presses, birth of a Czar and the winning of great battles.

Medals of the imperial Russian era are covered in Werlich's Russian Orders, Decorations, and Medals. The medals of the Soviets are well illustrated and annotated in Shated's Soviet Memorial Medals.

The second category that may be selected by the collector is the collection and study of paper money. The collector would then be known as a syngraphist. Catharine the Great had the first Russian paper money printed and it has continued to the present time with several short interruptions. Some of the issues of Czarist notes are considered to be the most beautiful ever issued. This is not only because of the design and color, but also because of the watermarks in the notes. The notes in this category vary in size from postage stamp size to huge 5-inch by 11-inch notes. The designs vary from the Czar or Czarina in their royal regalia to the peasant plodding along in his homespun garb. The notes may be collected by the following divisions; Imperial Provisional Government and Soviet. The Provisional Government was of such short duration that only a few issues were released. The others are covered by eras represented by hundreds of different issues of notes that can be purchased at reasonable prices. These books will be beneficial to the collector of Russian Soviet notes: Pick, Standard Catalog of World Paper Money, for local issues: Karda-koff, Katalog der Geld-escheine Von Russland und der Baltischen Staaten, and Erik Johanson's, Type Register of Checks and Katalog Banknotes of Soviet Union.

The third category identifies the collector as a scripophilist. This is the collection of Bonds and stock certificates. Russian bonds date back to the time of Peter the Great and are still issued at the present time. The collections of bonds may be divided into government, railway, and cities. The Governmental bonds were issued to raise money for the construction of buildings, waterways, army expenses and reduction of debt. Railway bonds were issued largely in the 1850-1910 era. Governmental and railway bonds were largely purchased by foreign capitalists from Great Britain, France and the United States. City bonds were issued for the repair of streets, construction of buildings, and intercity transportation systems. This hobby is comparatively new when compared with other hobbies. It has been very popular in England and has existed in this country for at least 10 years. Stock certificates and bonds still can be purchased at reasonable prices. Two fourth category is entirely new to the United States and it is probable that less than 30 collectors in North America are collecting the items. However, in Russia it has been a popular hobby since the days of Nicholas II. Collectors are called "Falerists". They collect and study Russian "znachki" or pin-on badges. The znachki may be divided into two mail groups: those issued by governmental mints and those issued by individual manufacturing plants. The znachki are issued to honor persons, historical events, cities, sports teams, religious institutions, health resorts, or even simply to identify employees of a manufacturing plant or an athletic team. The 1980 Moscow Olympic znachki are now very popular and no doubt will remain collector's items now that the games are over. They are usually very cheap in cost unless they were issued in limited numbers. One example of such is the "Golden Ring Set". This honors 20 ancient cities that surrounded Moscow and each had a gold-covered domed cathedral. The following book would be beneficial to the collector of znachki: I. G. Ilinskiv's Znachki Collecting and Cosmos Znachk of the U.S.S.R.

The fifth category is the smallest category but yet it is backed by such interesting historical facts that it makes it a challenge. This is Russian philately, or the collecting and study of postage stamps. In this instance, reference is made only to those postage stamps that were used as money in Russia, and not as the normal postage stamps in the general sense. Such stamps were not only used by some of the Czars and the Provisional Government, but also by military leaders of small pockets of armies during the Russian Revolution and Civil War. Some of the stamps were even counter-stamped and so served several agencies. The books recommended for the second category also serve this category. Also Stanley Gibbon's Simplified Whole World Stamp Catalogue is helpful.

RUSSIAN NUMISMATIC ISSUES (Cont'd)

So five categories of Russian/Soviet materials are available to the hobbyist. All have tremendous historical backgrounds that involve historical figures who lived in luxury as the Czars and also the peasants who lived in poverty. They reflect peaceful times in the past; images on notes to emotion-charged vignettes, such as the determined defiant look on a mother's face protecting her children on a bond. Hours of research for the material will be rewarding to the hobbyist in yielding a better understanding of the unknown giant of the Middle Ages that has awakened into a world power in the 20th century.

REVISED EDITION OF STANDARD GRADING GUIDE FOR CANADIAN & COLONIAL DECIMAL COINS

A revised edition of "STANDARD GRADING GUIDE FOR CANADIAN & COLONIAL DECIMAL COINS" by James E. Charlton and the late Robert C. Willey, and edited by Patrick Glassford and Bill Boynton was released in 1999 at $19.95 retail. It was first published in 1965 by Whitman Publishing Co., Racine, Wisconsin. The book is available from the publisher: The Unitrade Press, 99 Floral Parkway, Toronto, Ontario, M6L 2C4. telephone (416) 242 5900 for $3.00 extra for postage and handling plus GST for Canadians.

The 190 page book is printed on 6 x 9 inch pages and bound with a soft cover. Only circulating Canadian and Colonial decimal coins are covered.

The grading characteristics for each different obverse or reverse design for Canadian and Colonial decimal coins are covered, starting with Good-4 through About Uncirculated-50 for the earlier coins, and Fine-12 or Extra Fine-40 through About Uncirculated -50 for the coins of Queen Elizabeth II.

The coverage is by denomination, starting with the Canadian one cent coin for all British Monarchs (Queen Victoria through Queen Elizabeth II) and finishing with the gold sovereign with the "C" mint mark issued between 1908-1919. The grading characteristics of the Colonial decimal coinages of New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island are covered in the last 65 pages of the book.

The following general data is given for each different obverse or reverse design: the years in which the coin was issued; an actual drawing of both sides of the coin; a complete description of both sides of the coin; and one to several sentences on the "Points of Wear".

Then follows very clear and enlarged drawings showing the detail shown on the coin for the condition being described. Parts that are worn for the grade being shown are not shown in the drawing. A circle around major parts of wear are shown on some drawings with thin lines pointing to each circle. Several sentences of text are given with the drawing for each grade to explain in detail the points of wear. The points of wear for each grade are given in a drawing of the coin in the text beneath the coin. This makes grading uniform, no matter where it is done and is an excellent guide on the subject of exact grading for each grade for each major design change in Canadian and Colonial decimal coins.

A copy should be in the library of each coin club. (J.R.)

NATIONAL NUMSIMATIC COLLECTION

Welcome to the National Numismatic Collection (NNC) of the Smithsonian Institution, one of the largest numismatic collections in the world. Located in the National Museum of American History, the NNC includes approximately one million objects--more than 400,000 coins and some 550,000 pieces of paper money. The NNC maintains an extensive exhibition hall on the third floor, although due to space restrictions, only about 6,000 items are on view at any time. The collection encompasses the entire history of money of the world; coins and paper money, as well as medals. It contains fascinating objects such as beads, wampum, dentalia, and other products once used as money. The full historic range of numismatic material is represented from the earliest coins created 2,700 years ago, up to the latest inventions: credit cards and electronic monetary exchange.

The main emphasis of the collection is the development of United States money and medals. The core of the collection, consisting of more than 18,000 items, including coins of great rarity, came to the Smithsonian in 1923 from the United States Mint. Among exceptional rarities in the U.S. section are the Brasher half doubloon, the 1849 double eagle (first of the gold 20 dollar pieces), and two 1877 fifty dollar patterns. Other rarities are the very popular and rare 1913 Liberty head nickel as well as all three types of the 1804 dollar. Among recent donations are the unprecedented Josiah K. Lilly holdings, consisting of 6,150 gold, including an almost complete US gold coin collection, a very rich Latin American gold section and many of the great rarities of European gold coins, such as the 20 excelentes de la Granada of Ferdinand and Isabella, and the two large and heavy 100 ducats of Austria and Poland.

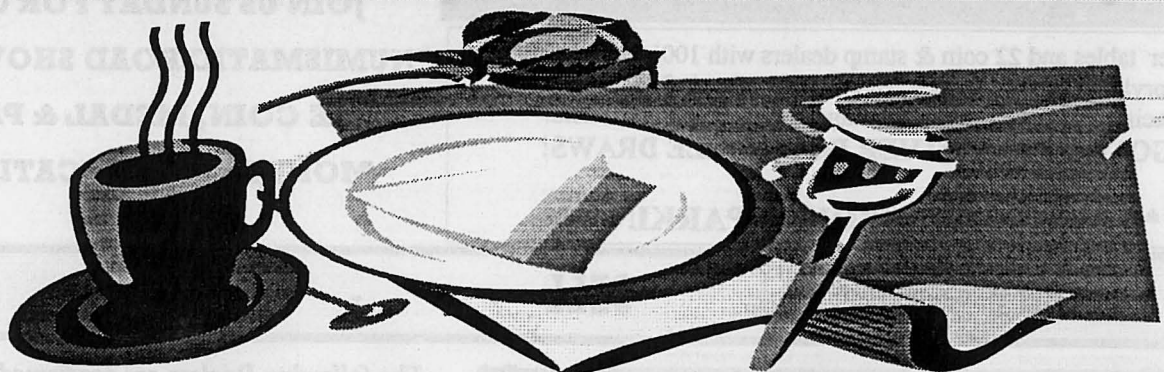

Another outstanding donation is the Willis H. duPont collection of more than 12,000 Russian coins in all metals, including platinum, from the Grand Duke Georgii Mikhailovich estate. The ancient Greek section has grown through many small donations, notably that of Capt. B. Bennett, to almost 19,000 coins. The recent donation of the "Demareteion" decadrachm of Syracuse and 4 related masterpieces of early Greek numismatic art by John W. Walter has tremendously enhanced the importance of the ancient collections. Also of great importance is the large collection of paper money donated by Mortimer Neinken, or the group of checks with presidential signatures from the Chase Manhattan collection. The NNC exhibit hall includes a number of permanent exhibits supplemented by a small number of temporary exhibits. The permanent exhibits focus on the "History of Money and Medals" exhibit which gives an overview of the development of the monetary economy as evidenced in coins, paper money, and other media of exchange. The history of US money is displayed from its earliest beginnings to the present with the recent additions of the "Engraver's Art In U.S. Mint Commemorative Coins" and an exhibit on the development of the $100 bill.
